The tallest fish story we have heard this season is told of John Bruce, Jr., of Worcester, Mass., a junk dealer who has traveled through this country several years and is known to many of our people. He went to a lake about thirty miles from St. Leon Springs, P. Q., and in one day's fishing caught an immense number of good size, as may be judged from the fact that eighty-five of them picked up at random weighed fifty two pounds. But large as were the fish, they could not compare with the size of the mesquitons and black flies. Unlike the traditional mesquitore of which it was said "many of them would weigh a pound," Mr. Bruce thinks it would take very few of them to weigh a pound. And how they would be the said "many of them would weigh a pound," Mr. Bruce thinks it would have they would be the said "nany of them would weigh a pound," Mr. Bruce thinks it would have they would be them to weigh a pound. And how they would be them to weigh a pound. And here they would be them to weigh a pound. And here they would be the said "nany of them would keep him alive six months.
